Abstract. The main focus of this book is on the causation of starvation in general and of famines in particular. The traditional analysis of famines concentrates on food supply. This is shown to be fundamentally defective—it is theoretically unsound, empirically inept, and dangerously misleading for policy. The author develops an alternative method of analysis—the 'entitlement approach', which concentrates on ownership and exchange.

I've just finished (the main text of) Amartya Sen's 'Poverty and Famines: An Essay on Entitlement and Deprivation'. Sen (famously) argues that, contrary to conventional belief, most famines aren't created by food shortages. Harvest failures, reductions in food imports, droughts, etc, are often contributing factors – but far more important are the social systems that determine how a society's food is distributed.
