Who We Be: The Colorization of America is a journey through the nation's relationship with race from 1963 until today. It is a story of both bravery and forgetting, of invisibility and hypervisibility, and of hope and disillusion. By telling the stories behind "multiculturalism," "the culture wars," "post-racialism," and the "new majority," author Jeff Chang offers us a nuanced understanding of our current state of both progress and backslides on racial equity.
